

AUGUST DREIER TRUST LOSES

Collection of Inheritance Tax by the Territorial Treasurer
Was Legal.

The Territory has won out in the suit brought against it by Cecil Brown, trustee under deed of trust of August Dreier, and the $11,864 inheritance tax paid into the treasury by the trustee under protest, and which he sued to recover, remains in the possession of the Territory. The decision in the matter was rendered by Judge Robinson yesterday. It is not, however, final, as the plaintiff will appeal the case to the supreme court. The appeal will be perfected at once, so as to have the matter heard as soon as possible and an opinion rendered before the first of the new year.

August Dreier on November 5, 1907, executed to Cecil Brown as trustee 2996 shares of August Dreier, Limited, valued at about $200 a share. The stock remained in Dreier's name on the books of the corporation during his lifetime. He died May 19, 1908, and the trust deed was not recorded until after his death.

Treasurer Conkling claimed inheritance tax on the shares conveyed in trust, but the plaintiff contended that the property was not subject to the payment of an inheritance tax. Judge Robinson, however, decides differently, and the tax which was paid under protest remains in the treasury. The $11,864 was the legal two per cent. on the total valuation of $599,200. Deputy Attorney-General Sutton represented the treasurer in the suit.

You can't afford to take chances with your drinking water these times while the water is so bad. Order a bottle of distilled water from Ryecraft's Fountain Soda Works; phone 270. No danger of sickness if you drink this water.
